Session 1

Session 1

Identity Discovery

Session Objectives:

- Infer Values through their Story
  - Identify their values based on the 'My Career Story-1' activity.
  - This is the first step in developing self-awareness in the self-discovery journey.

- Identify the contributing factor(s)
  - Based on their story, experiences and the current phase, identify the factors contributing to their concerns.
  - Contributing factors (could be one or more) are explained in the upcoming slides.

- Explain the apt Theory
  - If applicable, based on the client's age, understanding and awareness, explain the approach behind the session.
  - Sometimes, doing this helps clients believe in the coach and the process more.

- Goal, Goal and Goal
  - Identify and nail down the goal - what the client wants by the end of the journey.

Contributing Factors

1. Cognition: Factors related to focus, biases in thinking, attention that are contributing to the challenges faced by the client.

2. Emotions: Factors related to emotional stability and emotion regulation that are contributing to the challenges faced by the client.

3. Behaviour: Behavioral and habit related concerns such as procrastination that are contributing to the challenges faced by the client.

4. Physical Health: Physical health concerns that are hindering the clients' progress/ confidence and contributing to the challenges faced by the client.

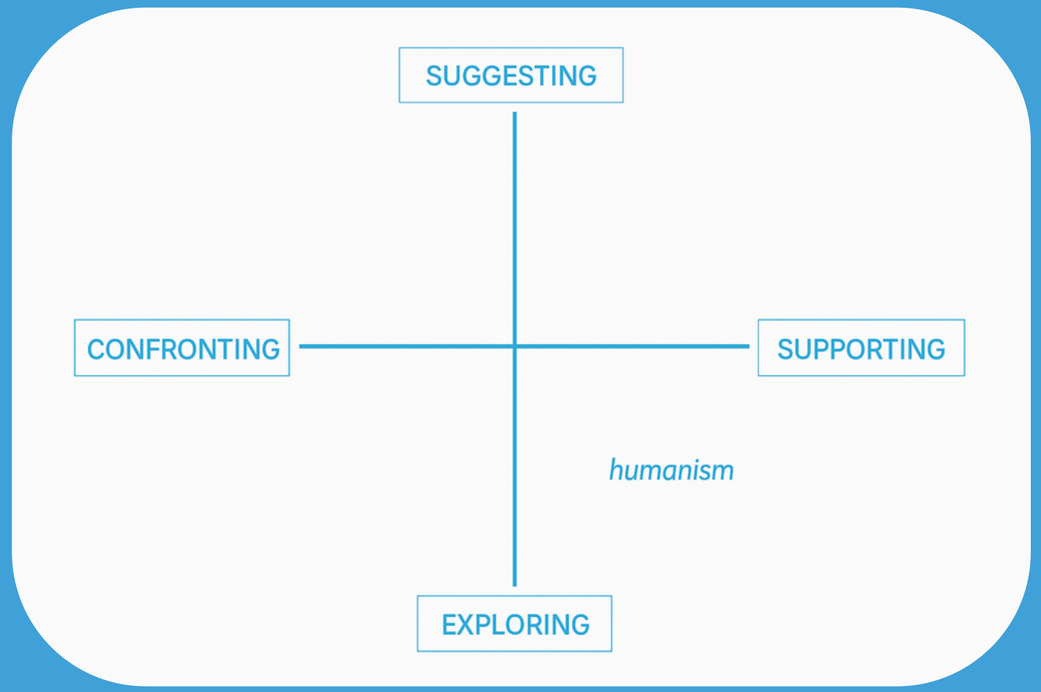
5. Context: Factors outside of client's control that are contributing to the challenges faced by the client, like, family support, finances and social-cultural-political factors.

Session Theme

Humanistic Approach

- The Humanistic Approach believes every person has the capability to grow, learn, and improve. It focuses on the whole person – their feelings, values, and unique life experiences. The coach's role is to create a safe, respectful space where the client feels understood and accepted.

Adapted from De Haan 2008

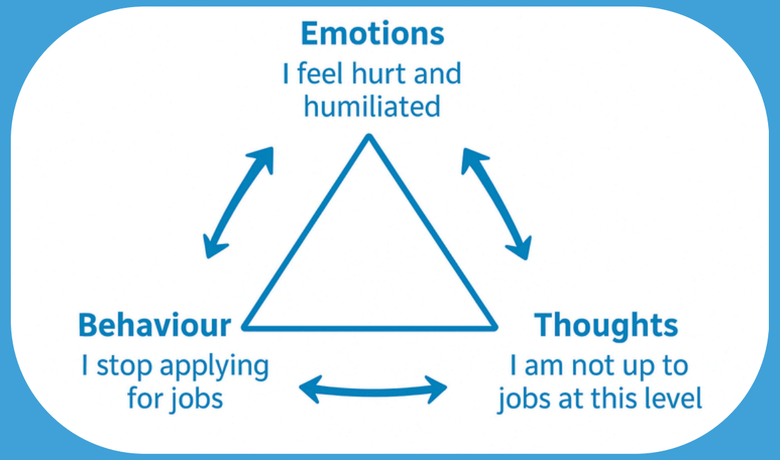


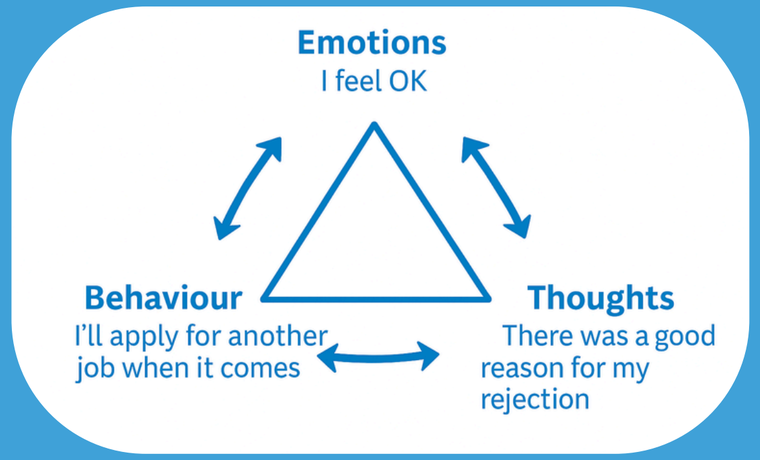
Session Theme

Cognitive Behavioural Coaching (CBC) Approach

- Unhelpful thoughts and feelings can block progress. In those moments, the Cognitive Behavioural Coaching can help change the way we think. CBC looks at how thoughts, feelings, and actions affect each other. Negative thinking patterns can lead to negative emotions and behaviours. By changing these patterns, clients can feel and act differently.

Unhelpful cognitive behavioural process





Helpful cognitive behavioural process

Example : I have been rejected for a job I applied for (event). I feel hurt and humiliated (feelings). I think I'm a failure and not up to jobs at this level (thoughts). I decide that I'm not going to apply for a job like this the next time one comes up (behaviour).

Session Beginning

- Start the session by greeting the client and the breathing exercise.
- Briefly re-cap the previous session.
- Set the goal/context/agenda for the session.
- Explain apt theory if you consider it helpful.
- Explain their scores on the career maturity assessment.
- Always have the client share their screen to show the activity they've completed – this will actively engage them in the session – rather than playing a passive role.

Infer Values

- Spend the next 15 mins of the session to infer the client's values through the story.
- Encourage the client to share stories that highlight their core values.

Questions for the session

Questions & Probes

Question 1. Tell me a bit more about that

- Probe: How did you feel when this was happening?
- Probe: What did you do after that?

Question 2. How did that experience make you feel, think and behave?

- Probe: After this incident, how did you feel?
- Probe: After this incident, did you think any differently?

Questions & Probes

Question 3. Who & what matters to you?

- Probe: What is the one thing that is most important to you in all this?

Question 4. Now that you have shared your story, how does that sound to you?

- Probe: How do you feel while narrating this story? Do you see anything you haven't realized before?
- Probe: Does it sound any different to you as you narrate it? Is there anything that surprised you?

Questions & Probes

Question 5. Retirement party activity (optional for further probing)

- Imagine your life a few years from now. You have chosen a career path and you have been working in your interested field of work.
- Your family and friends organized a 10 year work anniversary party (younger audience/students)/retirement party (adults/working professionals) for you.
- At the party, you're asked to give a short speech. What would you say about your journey, values, choices etc?

Question 6. Where are you hoping to be by the end of the sessions?

- Probe: What would make you say "This was totally worth my time"?
- Probe: Imagine that this is our last session. What do you hope has changed?

Identify and nail down the goal

Questions & Probes

Question 7. What are your key takeaways from this session?

- Probe: Was there anything that we discussed today that made you feel understood or helped you think differently?
- Probe: Did any question or topic today lead you to realize something new?

Always end the session by:

- Summarizing the entire discussion.
- Explaining the activities and assessments to be completed for the next session.
- Agreeing on date/time for the next session.
- Reminding that you can offer support between sessions – related to activities etc.

Assessments & Activities for Session-2

Assessments

1. RIASEC: Categorizes people's interests into six themes: Realistic, Investigative, Artistic, Social, Enterprising, and Conventional. The idea is that individuals are more satisfied and successful in careers that match their dominant interest areas. By identifying a person's top interests, this helps us support the client in exploring suitable career paths aligned with their preferences.

2. Personality: The Big Five personality model by John and Srivastava measures five broad traits: Openness, Conscientiousness, Extraversion, Agreeableness, and Neuroticism. It is one of the most widely researched frameworks in psychology. Each trait reflects stable patterns of thinking, feeling, and behaving. Understanding these traits is important for self-awareness as well as career exploration.

Activities

1

- My Life Collage: The main aim of this assessment is to help the client visualize (through drawings, doodling and pictures) their current phase of life - including anything that is helpful as well as unfavorable for them. It is important that the client uses less words and more visuals to describe their life as it is right now.
- The second step of the activity involves the client visualizing (in the same manner as above) their dream life - including routines, dreams about family, travel, finances and other aspirations.
- Through these 'collages', we help the client see - where they are in life right now, where would like they like to be and what is coming in the way (various types of challenges)

- Note: All assessments and activities are sent to clients via pre-prepared links/forms through email.
